Dog Licensing Changes

IT'S A GLORIOUS TIME OF YEAR.

Temperatures are cooling, leaves are changing colors, and it feels invigorating to be outside.

I recently brought in our season's harvest of apples and peaches. What we don't eat we will freeze for later. I have also enjoyed buying fresh local produce at the Farmers Market. The market continues through the end of the month. Autumn is a time when we reap the rewards of our summer labors and enjoy the abundance that nature produces.

Mayor Westmoreland

We can look forward to the changing colors and cooler temperatures because we know what to expect and therefore can plan and prepare for the changing seasons. Summer doesn't last forever. Autumn warns us that the time has come to bring in our crops and prepare for winter.

Things have never been better in Eagle Mountain and the future has never looked brighter. However, that doesn't mean that we don't have individual trials or that situations can't change drastically at some point. One of the things we can always count on is that things will change.

We don't know what the future may bring. We may have continued prosperity for many years but at some point there could be a correction in the market, a downturn in the economy, a war could breakout, or an earthquake could shake us up. I do not think it negative but wise to prepare in good times for disruptive changes that are sure to come.

I am reminded of a story about a cowboy that was looking for a job. He was told of a ranch that was in need of a ranch hand. He went to see the rancher and in the process of the interview the rancher told him about the long hours and the dreadful storms they often experienced that time of year. The cowboy calmly responded that he could sleep through any storm. The rancher was not impressed by that comment but needed the help so he agreed to hire the cowboy, if only for the season. The rancher gave him instructions and informed the cowboy that he would be gone for a few days to take care of some business and pick up supplies.

The rancher returned late one evening and went straight to bed. He awoke in the middle of the night to the sounds of a raging storm. In a panic he jumped out of bed and ran to inspect his wheat and hay and found them tied and tarped. He went to the corrals and found them mended and full of livestock, the horses in the barn, chickens in their coop, tools and equipment stowed and out of the elements. In amazement he found all the doors bolted, shutters fastened, and firewood stacked.

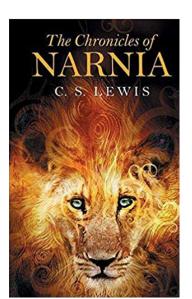

The rancher then checked on his hired hand and, of course, found him sound asleep. The rancher then understood the meaning of man's words, "I can sleep through a storm."

In a rapidly growing city like Eagle Mountain change can bring questions and concerns. Similarly the more a city can plan ahead we can know what to expect and look forward to positive change. It's when we don't plan that we get surprised by things we did not anticipate.

Now is the time to prepare. That way when the storm comes we will be ready. To that effort we will continue to work on economic development, road funding, parks, trails, open space, agriculture, and wildlife preservation.

I am currently interested in hearing from residents who would like to be involved in emergency preparedness efforts and help the city prepare for "storms" that may come our way. Anyone interested in participating, please email me.

Keeping Contaminants Out of Drinking Water

Fertilizer and household hazardous waste such as batteries, chemicals, oil, paint, etc. can pose a risk to the drinking water supply if not handled properly.

Please visit the Eagle Mountain City Water Department's homeowner's education page for fact sheets that detail the proper handling and disposal of these materials.

EMERGENCY PREPARATION

Evacuation Tips

IN CASE OF EVACUATION

In a disaster situation, it may be necessary to evacuate your home for several days or longer. Because disasters can strike with little or no warning, you should be prepared to leave at a moment's notice. Knowing beforehand the steps to take in case of evacuation can make a big difference.

- Contact the local emergency management office to learn evacuation routes for your area.
- Determine where you will go if your community is evacuated.
- Discuss with your family the possibility of evacuation.
- Find out your child's school evacuation policy.
- Check that your disaster supply kit is assembled and ready to go.
- Make sure your car is filled up fuel may be in short supply during a disaster.

WHEN AUTHORITIES TELL YOU TO EVACUATE

- Bring your disaster supply kit.
- Wear sturdy shoes and clothing.
- Unplug home electronics.
- Lock the doors and windows.
- Turn off the main switches and valves for gas, water and electricity, if instructed.
 - Inform a friend or relative of your route.
- Follow recommended evacuation routes. Watch for washed-out bridges, flooded areas and downed power lines.

PETS

- Pets should not be left behind during a disaster, but do not risk your own safety attempting to find them if you must evacuate quickly.
- Attach ID tags to your pet with your name and address.
- Remember that most emergency shelters do not allow pets (except service animals).
- Make a list of pet shelters and of hotels that permit animals in the area you would evacuate to.
- Put together an emergency supply kit for your pet. Include things like a first aid kit, food dishes, a litter box, a leash or pet carrier, medication, food, veterinary records and water.

IF YOU'RE GOING TO A PUBLIC SHELTER

- Be aware that alcoholic beverages, pets and weapons are not allowed in public shelters.
- Practice patience and cooperation. Sharing space with many others can be a challenge.
- Stay in the shelter until authorities advise you it is safe to leave.

Wildlife in Eagle Mountain Series: Desert Cottontail

In Utah there are three species of hares and three species of rabbits. The hares consist of the white-tailed jackrabbit (Lepus townsendii), the black-tailed jackrabbit (Lepus californicus) and the snowshoe hare (Lepus americanus). The pygmy rabbit (Sylvilagus idahoensis), the mountain cottontail (Sylvilagus nuttalli) and the desert cottontail (Sylvilagus audubonii) make up the rabbit group.

There are fundamental differences between rabbits and hares. Hares live above ground in a small leaf-litter depression, which is often on a hill or other slight elevation. The elevated depression allows the hare to keep a watchful eye out for predators and other animals. Rabbits tend to live in burrows underground. Burrows are 6–7 inches long, 3–5 inches deep and five inches wide.

Occasionally, rabbits will move into the abandoned den of some other animal.

Another difference is that hares are precocial and rabbits are altricial. Precocial means the offspring of hares, at birth, are open-eyed and furred and thus are capable of a high degree of independent activity from birth.

Rabbits, on the other hand, produce closed-eye and naked or altricial young. Altricial means that offspring are helpless at birth and require parental care for some time afterward.

Most common to Eagle Mountain is the desert cottontail, which is 12–15 inches long, weighs 1–3 pounds, with ears 3–4 inches in length. The fur is a pale gray color with a yellowish tinge. It is a common rabbit in Utah and can be found below 6,000 feet on open plains, foothills and low valleys, around sagebrush, pinions and junipers. From late afternoon throughout the night is when the desert cottontail is most active. It mainly eats grasses and sagebrush.

Watch for our furry friends as you are out exploring.

Services

Eagle Mountain now offers to Eagle Mountain dog owners the two-year and three-year options for dog licensing. Previously only one-year licenses were available.

Dog licenses may be purchased at the Reception Desk or Utility Billing office at City Hall. Our business hours are M-F 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., except holidays. Please note we can only accept payment by check. The licenses are processed through North Utah Valley Animal Shelter. Please bring proof of current rabies vaccination.

1 yr. - $15 (altered) $35 (unaltered) 2 yr. - $25 (altered) $65 (unaltered) 3 yr. - $35 (altered) $95 (unaltered)

Any person owning, possessing or harboring any dog must obtain a current rabies vaccination and a dog license for the dog within thirty (30) days after the dog reaches the age of four (4) months, or, in the case of a dog over four (4) months within thirty (30) days of the acquisition of the dog.

One of the many benefits of a dog license is that it serves as a way to locate your dog if your dog is ever lost.
